I Tell Them I'm a Liberal Arts Major

by Carol Jin Evans

And then, of course, they say:
how quaint; and what are you going to do with that?
What am I going to do with it?
As though these four phenomenal years were an object I could cart away from college—a bachelor's degree across my back like an ermine jacket, or my education hung from a ceiling on a string.
What am I going to do with it?
Well, I thought perhaps I'd put it in a cage to see if it multiplies or does tricks or something so I could enter it in a circus and realize a sound dollar-for-dollar return on my investment.
Then, too, I am exploring the possibility of whipping it out like a folding chair at V.F.W. parades and Kiwanis picnics.
I might have it shipped and drive it through Italy.
Or sand it down and sail it.
What am I going to do with it?
I'll tell you one thing:
I'm probably never going to plant sod around it.
You see, I'm making it a definitive work:
repapering parts of my soul that can never be toured by my friends;
wine glass balanced in one hand, warning guests to watch the beam that hits people on the head when they go downstairs to see the den.
You don't understand—
I'm using every breath to tread water in all-night swimming competitions with Hegel, Marx, and Wigggenstein;
I am a reckless diver fondling the bottom of civilization for ropes of pearls;
I am whispering late into the night on a river bank with Zola;
I am stopping often, soaking wet and exhausted, to weep at the Bastille.
What am I going to do with it?

I'm going to sneak it away from my family gathered for my commencement and roam the high desert making love to it.

Class of 1982

The Liberal Arts Graduate in the World of Work

Pictured on our cover are three outstanding Wesleyan seniors of the class of 1982, graduates of a liberal arts college. Each is seeking a job; each hopes to have a successful career in the business world. How will these and other liberal arts graduates fare in the marketplace in this technological age? They should do very well, very well, indeed.

Standing behind our seniors Sally Sanders, Patti Stanukinos, and Janice Jacoby, are executives Bud Moss of Georgia Power Company, Ray Bourne of Packaging Corporation of America and William C. Jones of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith. Participating in Wesleyan's Internship Program this year, each of these seniors had an opportunity to encounter the world of business with these companies while finishing their undergraduate studies. Internships at Wesleyan have proven to be a very helpful bridge between academics and careers. The primary goal of the program is to give students an objective, realistic view of a specific profession through actual work experience with knowledgeable professionals.

Executive Ray Bourne is enthusiastic about the potential of the liberal arts graduate. "Liberal arts graduates have had the opportunity for flexibility in their education that makes their training in our company more responsive to learning the specific skills we teach. The liberal arts graduate has the ability to speak about our products, to write about them and to communicate with our publics."

The validity of a liberal arts education has been seriously questioned in the last two decades. Ironically, these are the same two decades that have witnessed the dramatic rise in opportunities for women in the world of work. Dismantling of "core curriculum" requirements for liberal education was prevalent in the 60's and 70's across most campuses, including the prestigious "ivy league" schools. Recently, however, Harvard has instituted a new "core curriculum", giving the pendulum a strong push towards a brighter future for the liberal arts graduates. The new "core curriculum" at Harvard as explained by President Bok offers these goals:

1. A capacity to write effectively and clearly.
2. An understanding of mathematical reasoning.
3. A knowledge of the essential elements of scientific discovery.

4. An acquaintance with humanistic modes of thought and expression in literature and art.

In the Spring, 1982 issue of National Forum, the Phi Kappa Phi Journal, Arthur W. Chickering explores a liberal education as preparation for work. He states that "effective performance in the world of work involves a set of clearly identifiable cognitive abilities, interpersonal skills, and motivational characteristics." Chickering contends that these very abilities, skills and characteristics are the aims of liberal education, strongly supporting higher education's claim that a liberal education is a strong preparation for the world of work today.

A comprehensive new study entitled "The Liberal Arts Major in Bell System Management" covering the last 20 years, further supports the superior potential of the liberal arts graduate. At the present time the Bell System employs more than 6,000 college graduates each year. Of these, more than one third are liberal arts graduates. New graduates are hired into the first of seven levels of management in the company. The hope is that all of them will rise to at least the third level, which is the entry into middle management.

The study concluded that "nearly half (46 percent) of the humanities and social science majors were considered to have potential for middle management compared to only 31 percent of the business majors and 26 percent of the engineers." One overall conclusion from the 20 years of data studied is that "there is no need for liberal arts majors to lack confidence in approaching business careers."

As Roger B. Smith, Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of General Motors has stated in an article, "Why Business Needs The Liberal Arts:"

The greatest asset that people with a liberal arts background can bring to business is their abi-

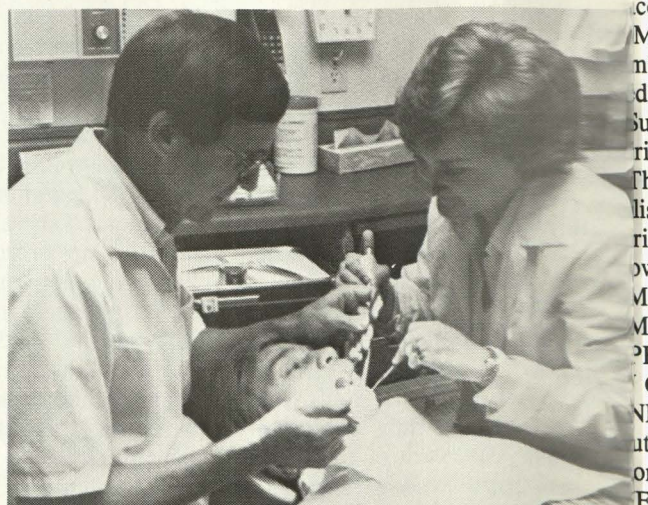

"The Internship Services Program provides students with an opportunity to know if they are planning to enter a field in which they will be happy. They're offered an opportunity to relate to the real challenges that the business world presents."

"My Wesleyan education inspired me to achieve, achieve, achieve, and to observe, observe, observe. My undergraduate experience helped me gain confidence that later helped me rear a family, make through Emory Law School and to sustain my legal practice."

lity to learn new skills. While the liberal arts have been a person's course of study or a supplement to a more specialized education, the depth and breadth of insight and knowledge gained through their study are essential to the leadership of any major corporation today.

Wesleyan Internship Program: A Bridge to the World of Work

Internship programs are becoming a very important part of academic programs at colleges and universities throughout the country. Wesleyan was among the first colleges to establish a variety of internships for its students. The Internship Services Program is now a significant component of Wesleyan's overall academic curriculum.

Approximately 65 students participated in internships this year, the highest participation since the program began in 1978.

I recently attended a state level conference for colleges on internship programs," reports Dr. Priscilla Danheiser, Director of Internship Services. "By far, Wesleyan had the most established internship program of any school attending the conference." We anticipate new directions and further expansion of our internship program next year. Wesleyan has recently joined both the National Society for Internships and Experiential Learning and the Council for the Advancement of Experiential Learning," says Dr. Danheiser.

Each year since the beginning of the program, Wesleyan has expanded the number and variety of internship offerings for students. For example, a new addition this year was a four week internship in veterinary medicine through the Veterinary Medicine School of the University of Georgia.

At Wesleyan, there are two levels of internships. In the lower level for freshmen and sophomores, students gain a broad knowledge of potential career areas. In the upper level for juniors and seniors, students obtain a more detailed overview of a specific career area and develop specific skills and competencies necessary for entry level employment. Both levels of internships receive academic course credit.

Wesleyan offers internships through many different programs. The Macon Rotary Club offers numerous placements for our students through the Rotary Internship Program begun for Wesleyan students in 1978. Rotarians place students in internships in their individual businesses. The Governor's Intern Program, open to juniors and seniors, offers internship opportunities statewide in all areas of government.

Wesleyan's fine internship program owes much of its success to the companies and agencies who sponsor our students in their internships. The following companies and agencies participated in the 1981-1982 Internship Services Program.

Anne Cox Chambers

“Managing Change, One Woman’s Perspective”

Anne Cox Chambers, Chairman of Atlanta Newspapers and Director of Cox Enterprises and Cox Broadcasting addressed graduating seniors at the 142nd commencement exercises on May 8. At the close of the ceremony, Frank C. Jones, Chairman of Wesleyan’s Board of Trustees, presented an honorary Doctor of Public Services degree to Mrs. Chambers for her distinguished careers in business and in the diplomatic corps and for her community service.

Ambassador to Belgium from 1977 to 1981, Mrs. Chambers was presented L’Ordre de la Couronne (The Order of the Crown) by King Baudoin. She is only the second ambassador to have received this high honor.

In 1973, she became the first woman in Atlanta to become a bank director with Fulton National Bank, and she was the first woman to be elected a director of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce.

“The problem is not to suppress change, which cannot be done, but to manage it.”

In her address, “Managing Change, One Woman’s Perspective,” Mrs. Chambers outlined for the graduates the strategies she has used to manage change in her own life and careers. She urged the graduates to:

1. Consciously assess your own life space. Having done this, you can begin to consciously influence it. Timing is everything, and you must be sensitive to know when to speed up and slow down. Fine tune the micro environment, and even you can influence larger structural patterns.

You must consciously weigh the hidden costs of change against the benefits. This is not to suggest that change can or should be static. Some level of change is as vital to health as too much change is in aging. The problem is not to suppress change, which cannot be done, but to manage it.

If we opt for rapid change in all sectors of life, we can consciously attempt to build “stability zones” elsewhere.

When I was ambassador to Belgium in order to maintain my health on my frenetic schedule, I had my secretary protect the hour following lunch every day and my dog and I walked in the beautiful park; every evening for the hour ween 6-7 before I went out, I practiced yoga, and once a week I instructed the Embassy chef to prepare nothing but vegetables for lunch! Now you don't have to take walks, practice yoga or eat vegetables once a week, but you must have some islands of stability in your life.

Your studies and experience here at Wesleyan have given you valuable equipment to help you understand yourself, your capabilities and limitations. You have learned that in order to perform at your optimum level, you need "breaks" from concentrated academic study.

"You must have some islands of stability in your life."

Find the exquisite optimum point at which you live at the peak of effectiveness. This means finding ways to get just the right amount of change in your life. The search for this balance may be much of what the "pursuit of happiness" is about.

Turn to other women for ideas and help. One of the advantages of a women's college such as Wesleyan is the opportunity it offers for close personal sharing of common experiences. There is an increasingly strong network of women with aspirations and problems such as yours. Turn to them; it is comforting to know that you are not alone. I again relating to my own experience, there have been few women ambassadors, and none to Brussels, but all of them were outstanding. It was reassuring to me to know that these women had faced the challenge of operating in an almost exclusively male career with great courage and success.

4. Ritual is another key which you have to help you manage change. Each of you undoubtedly has favorite holidays, quirky family expressions and rituals. They provide stable points of reference that lend some pattern and continuity to everyday life. Hang onto them, even if it is a struggle.

5. Identify the nature of genuine freedom. Liberation for women has sometimes been taken as synonymous with being allowed to do things men do. If males do it, it must be freedom. We must be able to identify the nature of genuine freedom.

"Will what I am after bring me peace, satisfaction, gratitude, aliveness?"

We must begin by asking some probing questions:

- What is really important to me?
- What am I trying to prove in this world and to whom?
- Do I really need what I think I want?
- Will what I am after bring me peace, satisfaction, gratitude, aliveness?

"I am deeply honored to be a part of the noble Wesleyan College pioneer spirit."

6. Have the courage to accept success.

While males are not immune to the "fear of success" sickness, most of them do learn, practically from day one, that the consequences of success will be entirely positive. And, if they should be afraid, they are taught to face their fears head on. I cannot overemphasize the importance of courage.

7. Avoid "me-itis". There are values bigger than you are. There are some truths that we can know.

-The power, love and intelligence is within us all

-No matter how unordered life may seem, there is another order you can count on

Ask the right questions:

Not - "How do I get mine?"

But - "What is my task in life?"

"How do I best express myself and make use of being in the world?"

"How do I love fully?"

To take license from Dr. Dickens, these are neither the best of times nor the worst of times. For young people like yourselves who are graduating from a college with a long history of successful pioneering and perseverance, I believe these can turn into the most promising of times.

And for myself, I am today receiving my very first college degree — and from the world's first chartered college for women. I am deeply honored to be a part of the noble Wesleyan College pioneer spirit.

Dr. Elizabeth Tidball, Curriculum Consultant Visits Wesleyan

Dr. Elizabeth Tidball, center, studies the departmental curriculum with Division of Science and Mathematics instructors Dr. Steven McCullagh, Ms. Pat Lewis, Dr. Meledath Govindan, and Mrs. Myra Schrader.

Dr. Elizabeth Tidball, noted for her research on the role of women's colleges in contemporary society, visited Wesleyan May 2-3 as a curriculum consultant. Dr. Tidball was retained by the college as a consultant on the recommendation of the Trustee Committee on Student and Academic Affairs.

During her two day visit, Dr. Tidball examined the school's curriculum in an effort to evaluate how well it serves both the mission of the college and contemporary Wesleyan students, and how foresighted our future plans are in meeting the projected academic needs of women in the 1980's and 1990's.

Dr. Tidball is a professor of biology at George Washington University. She has given major addresses educating women for achievement on women's colleges at many national institutions, including Baldwin College, Mount Holyoke College, Ohio Northern University,olph-Macon Woman's College, ty College, and Sweet Briar College.

Dr. Tidball, who is listed in Who in America, Who's Who in American Women, and American and Women of Science, has received degrees from the University of Wisconsin at Madison, Wilson College, ty College, and Mount Holyoke College. She serves on the Board of Trustees at Sweet Briar College, College and Mount Holyoke College.

In addition to her work in the area of women's problems, Dr. Tidball has done extensive research in anatomy, physiology, and pharmacology. She has served as executive secretary of the Committee on the Education of Women in Science and Engineering for the Commission on Human Resources and as chairman of the Task Force on Women in Biology for the American Physiological Society.

South Georgia Conference Held at Wesleyan

More than 1,000 ministers and lay delegates participated in the 1982 session of the South Georgia Annual Conference hosted by Wesleyan College, June 7-10. Bishop Joel McDavid presided over the Conference.

A feature of this year's conference was a dramatic presentation emphasizing Christian Higher Education in Georgia, highlighting the Georgia Methodist Colleges. The Conference preacher was Bishop Kenneth W. Goodson of Durham, North Carolina.

Efforts to make the 1982 Conference a success were coordinated by Dr. Frederick Wilson, assistant to the President for church relations at Wesleyan, with the help of Methodist churches in the area. Plans are in progress for the 1983 Conference which will be held at Wesleyan.

Alumnae Wee

Nothing reflects the joy of alumnae weekend this year more than the Friday night dinner in the Anderson Dining Room. Beautiful centerpieces composed of candles and mirrors carried out the weekend theme, "Illuminating Our Traditions."

Trustee Rufus Green, Jane Mulkey Green '42, and former Alumnae Trustee Irene Sewell Hobby '22 chat with a group of alumnae.

FRIDAY

- Alumnae Board of Managers meeting; Karen Connor Shockley, '68, President.
- Alumnae Admissions Representative (AAR) Workshop with AAR Director Betsy Mudie presiding, met at Willet Library.
- Lovely walks through the campus and buildings led by Wesleyan students.
- Herbert Herrington's silver punch bowl graced the table for reception honoring alumnae, faculty and staff held in the Porter auditorium for Friday afternoon.
- "Bare Bones" candlelight reception was held in the West Gallery decorated and catered by Laura Sullivan Barkley, '68 and Betty Jo Harmock Boyes, '48. Plans and cost for renovation of gallery were displayed, help being sought from interested alumnae.
- The East Gallery housed an exciting exhibit by the Wesleyan Art faculty.
- "Illuminating Our Tradition" was the dinner theme in the Anderson Dining Room decorated with a maroon daisy arrangement by Nell Sheppard Terrell, '58. Mirrors on stands with miniature flower arrangements decorated each table. Cindy Smith, 81 sang after dinner and Mildred Efland, '42 played.
- T.V. and movie star, Ronny Colman along with George McKinney's Wesleyan students starred in the Theatre production "The Roper Dancers" for the evening entertainment.

Louise Bayne Haverfield '32 and Jeffie Ben Smith '22 take a restful pause to visit and some "catching up."

end Highlights

SATURDAY

Student Affairs Assistant Jeanon Moore drove the Atlanta Group IV Wesleyan van to shuttle alumnae to and from the President's home for a delightful tour and pre-brunch visit with Ann Hicks, wife of the President.

Delicious food greeted alumnae when they entered the Anderson Dining Room for Brunch - Flowers in Wesleyan bowler hats were on each table. Alumnae had a chance to enjoy visiting each other.

Annual meeting was held at noon in the Porter Auditorium with Navy Captain Maria S. Higgins, '57 as speaker. Karen Connor Shockley, '63 conducted the meeting and the candlelighting service inducting the seniors into the Alumnae Association.

Reunion classes held special parties on Friday and Saturday.

Special tour of Art Department and Senior Art exhibits under direction of chairman Joel Plum.

Alumnae Beverly Burd Fetner, '78 and Sharon Mattox Hopkin, '75 talked to Alumnae in the Science and Mathematics Departments.

"Golden Belle" dinner in the Manget Dining Room on Saturday evening was a highlight for reunion class members observing their 50th or older anniversary. Each one received a Wesleyan bud vase. Dinner was hosted by Dr. and Mrs. Fred Hicks.

SUNDAY

Chapel Service in the Burden Parlor ended a perfect weekend with Dr. Frederick Wilson speaking and Debbie McGee, '84 and Sheree Greene '84 singing.

Faculty Emeriti Ernestine Bledsoe '33 and Cornelia Shiver '25 are welcomed to campus by Alice Domingos, Assistant Director of Alumnae Affairs.

Enjoying a stroll on Wesleyan's beautiful campus are James Tate and his wife, Lillian Pafford Tate '32 and Malene Lee Morgan '32.

Members of the class of '72 gathered to attend the reception in the auditorium.

Alumnae

Smiling faces reflect the fun and fellowship enjoyed when the Atlanta Young Professionals Group met in March for a dinner meeting at Jilly's Ribs Restaurant. JANE GARDNER '76 and JULIE CASTLE '76 are co-chairmen for the group. Forty alumnae attended the meeting. Another meeting is planned for June.

When it was announced at the Annual meeting that a "closing-out" sale on all remaining Wesleyan Wedgwood china was taking place, alumnae lined up to add to their collection. A limited number of cups and saucers are still in stock in the "Chandler Building Scene." Plates, cups and saucers are available in the final "Wesleyan Female College Scene" in a mulberry color. No more of this china will be available after the last stock is sold. Each set may be ordered for $10 plus .04% Georgia sales tax plus postage. Please place your order through the alumnae office.

RA SULLIVAN BARKLEY '68, incoming president of the Wesleyan Alumnae Association for 1982-1985 presents a gift to honor BEN CONNOR SHOCKLEY '63, retiring president.

President Hicks' newly appointed Council of '36 is their Spring luncheon meeting in the Regent Dining Room. The council, appointed by the President of the College, is composed of a distinguished group of Macon Wesleyan Alumnae. The group meets four times a year and serves in an advisory capacity to the President. Chairman of the Council is Elsie Maxwell '33, Alumna and Trustee.

So what if Grandmother received the Distinguished Alumnae Award? Mildred Efland's granddaughter Katharine Delon found it all a bit tiring.

DR. LOUIE FRANCES WOODWARD MARSHALL '42, CAPTAIN MARIA HIGGINS '57, MILDRED FINCHER EFLAND '42, DOROTHY SIMMONS '32, MALENE LEE MORGAN '32.

Five Distinguished Alumnae Honored For Service and Achievement

Wesleyan College's Alumnae Association recognized five alumnae for distinguished service and achievements during the College's Alumnae Week-end April 16-17.

Maria Higgins, Louie Frances Woodward Marshall, Mildred Fincher Efland, Malene Lee Morgan, and Dorothy Simmons were honored.

Presented annually to individuals selected by the awards committee of the alumnae association, the presentations were one of the highlights of the annual alumnae gathering. One of the recipients, Maria Higgins, gave the Alumnae Day address, "Women in Leadership."

Captain Maria Higgins, of San Diego, California, serves as the Commanding officer of the Service School Command, Naval Training Center. A 1957 graduate of Wesleyan, Captain Higgins is one of 13 women to achieve the rank of Captain in the United States Navy. Continuing the family tradition of navy life, she successfully completed Officer Candidate School following her graduation from Wesleyan. Since entering the navy, she has earned a master's degree in business administration from Naval Postgraduate School and a master's degree in personnel management from Georgetown University.

As a Lieutenant, she established the U.S. Communications Center for Allied Forces, Southern Europe. She later served as regimental commander and military director of recruit indoctrination training at the Recruit Training Command-Women in Bainbridge, Maryland.

Following three tours in the Bureau of Naval Personnel and two overseas tours, she served two tours with the Recruiting Command, and, in 1978, she returned to Washington, D.C. where she was assigned as the Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Manpower, Personnel, and Training. In 1979, she was named Commanding Officer of the Service School Command. Captain Higgins' honors and awards include the meritorious Service Medal with three gold stars.

Also recognized for distinguished achievements was Louie Frances Woodward Marshall, Chief of Staff of the Lenwood Division of the Veterans Administration Hospital in Augusta. At the time of her appointment in 1974, Dr. Marshall was the only woman in such an executive post in Veterans Administration's 171 hospitals.

A 1942 graduate of Wesleyan and a 1948 graduate of the University of Georgia School of Medicine, she has been a professor of psychiatry at the Medical College of Georgia since 1974. Recently she has been a consultant to the Episcopal Bishop of Georgia.

Golden Belles Celebrate

Swapping memories of Wesleyan days, members of the Golden Belles assemble for the dinner in their honor given by President and Mrs. Hicks.

member of the Southern Regional Education Board Committee on use of television and movies in Teaching Psychology, and a district consultant for Training in Individual and Group Effectiveness and Resourcefulness. Dr. Marshall is also a member of Our Savior Episcopal Church. The Altar Guild, Human Needs Committee, the Commission on the Ministry of the Episcopal Diocese of Georgia, the Mental Health Association of Greater Augusta, and the Augusta Senior Entertainment Association of the Senior Citizens Council.

The following three Wesleyan graduates were recognized for their distinguished service to the College.

Malene Lee Morgan of Macon is a 1932 Wesleyan graduate. While in college, she served two years as student assistant in the Alumnae Office and in summer as a field representative in Tennessee, Missouri, and Arkansas. She has been active in the Newnan and Macon Alumnae Clubs and is a loyal participant in Wesleyan's 1836 Club. In the National Alumnae Association, she served as second vice-president. From 1952-1956, she served as Alumnae Director. She was influential in publishing Dr. Samuel Akers history of Wesleyan's first hundred years. In recognition of her dedication and devotion to Wesleyan, Mrs. Morgan serves the President's Council of 36.

Dorothy Simmons, of Macon, is also a 1932 Wesleyan graduate. Miss Simmons has served repeatedly as a class agent of Wesleyan's Loyalty Fund. She has helped with numerous telephone campaigns and volunteered with mailings and other responsibilities in the Alumnae Office. As a high school teacher, she has influenced students to attend Wesleyan, assisted with prospective student parties, and participated actively in all Macon Alumnae Club endeavors. This April, she has been elected national secretary of the Wesleyan Alumnae Association.

Mildred Fincher Efland, a 1942 graduate of Wesleyan, has served as president of the Atlanta Alumnae Club, member-at-large of the Alumnae Board of Managers, and, from 1975-1978, as an Alumnae Trustee. A Loyalty Fund agent, Mrs. Efland worked on Phase II of the Atlanta campaign for funds. She and her husband were chairmen of the North Georgia Area Campaign, Phase II.

A newly formed group gathered for a special dinner in the Manget Dining Room during alumnae weekend. President and Mrs. Hicks hosted the affair whose honored list included all alumnae who had celebrated their 50th anniversary reunion.

Membership is automatic upon reaching the 50th anniversary year. Meetings shall be held annually during alumnae weekend with all members invited. Golden Belles shall have the opportunity to renew friendships, make friendships and recall fond memories of Wesleyan. The Golden Belles shall become an important support group of the college and of the President.

Dr. Frederick Wilson conducts chapel service in the Burden Parlor. Many alumnae requested that his inspiring message "Do Not Blow Out Your Candle" be printed.

"Do Not Blow Out Your Candle"

Candlelight is especially suited to two experiences. Candlelight is for romance and remembering; it is for nostalgia; it is for reflection. And candlelight is for crisis; it is for emergency; it is for sudden darkness.

You have sat in the presence of the burning candle, transfixed by the flickering light. You have become quiet. You have walked down familiar paths, remembering. Or, you have sat in other rooms, comfortable, yet apprehensive about the coming of unexpected snow and ice. Suddenly there is a flash of light over the lawn, visible through the window. The room is plunged into darkness, and all at once voices appeal: "Someone get a candle." And while its welcome light is not adequate to fill the room, it is enough to guide footsteps through the shadowy house.

And so, on some unwanted day, at dusk, discouraged with the self, despondent by the facts of circumstance, spirit near frozen in the cold of loneliness, you may wander alone into an appealing restaurant and, at a table that is warmed by a single lighted candle, sit quietly for a while. Or, you may find a side chapel in a cathedral, and kneeling at some strange altar you are in the presence of a dozen flickering candles, each in its own small cup. You will light your own, believing. And in either place you will be soon aware of the overwhelming calm and peace; your tired mind freed to remember.

You will be again beside a certain lake at end of day, with a dear and trusted friend. you will be talking of mysteries and meanings, and long after sundown you will be there, sometimes not talking at all, but listening to each other, and to the silence about you. And at last you will walk refreshed to your studies.

You will see the nearly illegible note scribbled on the last page of a paper prepared for the end-of-term, the words of a trusted professor and counselor, challenging you to a sterner discipline and an expanded use of your powers and your God-gifts.

You will recall a bit of dialogue from a particular drama, and you will hold in your mind's eye the critic's review which praised your performance. You will hear the words of the gentle man saying how you have grown and what you have achieved.

You will hear the soft voice from a cherished professor reading the amazing poetry that you heard from the first time and your lips will begin to frame the inspiring words that speak again a sweet assurance to the weary spirit as they came with such delight when first you received them.

And at the candle-lit table, or at the sacred altar you will begin to feel the warmth and brightness of a glow in the tired mind and the misty spirit and you will have found the candle's light within - not perhaps to flood each corner, but sufficient to reveal a path that you will take to joy again and to self-belief, and to God's good earth.

You will be grateful for your memories of Wesleyan - and more grateful that you have them still. Do not blow out your candle; one dark night you well may need it again.

THE WESLEYANNES

The Wesleyannes, a music department ensemble, have just returned from a Florida tour. While on tour they performed for high school audiences and entertained perspective students at alumnae sponsored gatherings.

The Wesleyannes are regularly featured in programs for civic organizations and churches. Their music ranges from Sacred music to Broadway hits. Anyone interested in arranging an appearance of the group may contact Dr. Fletcher Anderson, Chairman of the Music Department. Their busy calendar requires scheduling well in advance.
